

IDENTITY FRAUD EXPENSE AND CYBER PROTECTION

Our lives and our homes are more connected than ever before. With more than ten connected devices in the average American home¹, it's time for a broad solution that addresses our digital lifestyles.

Are you at risk?

From online shopping and banking to social media and mobile smart home applications, we spend more than ten hours a day on connected devices². Our increasing reliance on these devices and constant connectivity comes with risks, including:

- Fraudulent debit card charges or compromised account numbers
- Hacked email or social media accounts
- Online cyber bullying or harassment
- Wire fraud scams

Real-life cyber risks

✓ Phishing and Electronic Theft

A woman received an email from her cell phone provider prompting her to update her account information for security reasons. Believing that the email was legitimate, she clicked the link and provided her complete bank account and billing address information. Later, she discovered several thousand dollars missing from her account and realized she had been tricked into sharing her information with a hacker.

You are not responsible for electronic losses reported to your bank or credit union within 60 days from the time you receive your statement. If your loss is not reimbursed by the bank, Acuity's cyber protection reimburses you for the theft of money from your bank account by electronic means.

✓ Wire Fraud

A caring uncle received an email from his niece saying she needed $5,000 to get out of jail in Mexico. It seemed legitimate because she was on spring break in Mexico. He wired the money as requested.

The FBI Internet Crime Complaint Center data shows wire fraud to be the most costly form of internet fraud. Banks are not required to bear the burden of the loss unless a court finds the bank negligent in their practices. Acuity's cyber protection reimburses you for the amount not covered by the bank.

✓ Cyber Extortion

A homeowner installed several smart home devices in his home, including security cameras that are managed through software on his computer. One day, while adjusting his security camera settings, his computer screen froze. A message then appeared demanding a ransom be paid to regain access to his computer.

Acuity's cyber protection would cover the ransom payment and costs associated with removing the ransomware.
